Catalog Copy: ARTH 254W Nineteenth Century American Art. Either semester. Three credits. Topics in American Art, 1770-1900. Prerequisite: ENGL 1010 or 1011 or 3800; open to juniors or higher.

W Criteria: Writing assignments are integrated into the course content by having students engage in a critical and focused way issues that are raised in lecture and in assigned reading. This may take one of several forms including individual research projects or extended commentary on assigned readings. Per the University guidelines, the course requires a minimum of 15 typed, double-spaced, finished pages (approximately 3750 words exclusive of notes, bibliography or illustrations.) Written work will be worth 50% of the final course grade; students may not pass the class without passing the writing assignments. These requirements will be clearly cited in the syllabus.

The primary mode of writing instruction is written commentary on student papers. In addition, in-class discussion will highlight proper documentation; it will also outline the basis of evaluation of the essays on content (originality and clarity of ideas) as well as form (technical skill such as grammar, punctuation, and spelling.) Sample student essays will be available in one of several guides to writing art history papers, including Sylvan Barnet, A Short Guide to Writing about Art. Students also will be encouraged to consult a reference to grammar and documentation such as Diana Hacker, A Pocket Style Manual .

The writing will be supervised while it is progress in the following manner. Students will re-write and re-submit written work in response to the instructor's written critique. Evaluation of written work will be based both on content and on form. Credit will be earned on the basis of individual writing; there are no group projects included in this course.
